FaceShop Pro 4.1.1. 1.01.[Pulmonary embolism in a patient with acute leukemia: diagnostic and therapeutic aspects]. In this report, we describe a case of acute myeloid leukemia (AML) complicated with pulmonary embolism and cerebral venous thrombosis. A 75-year-old male with AML developed hemoptysis and chest pain on the day after admission to hospital. A computed tomography (CT) scan revealed an enlargement of the hilum and bilateral pleural effusion and thrombosis of the superior sagittal sinus. AML associated with pulmonary embolism is an uncommon event, particularly in patients with other medical diseases. We discuss the differential diagnosis, associated risks, and CT findings of pulmonary embolism in patients with hematologic malignancies."I'm a student. I'm going to work at a fast food place in the morning, and then go to school. I'm not really very good at long-term planning," he says. "I don't feel real comfortable with it. I was like, 'I'll just pay with my debit card.' They said, 'No, you'll have to pay with a credit card.' I was like,
'Oh no.' It's weird that I'm at this age where I'm not even allowed to use a credit card. "So I gave him my debit card, and then when I got home, I found the receipt in my mailbox. I found that crazy." In a twist, a New York Post investigation -- in which the publication worked with RBC and learned that the debit card number itself belonged to a 10-year-old girl, Christian Potvin -- found that RBC had never been notified of any fraudulent activity. 570a42141b
