Given its light-weight nature, the tool won't be wasting any system resources in any case, although users will have the option to install it in your system's Program Files folder. Installing Shock Desktop is a simple matter and it doesn't take much time to get started. We were able to install the application within less than 5 minutes, once the installation completed. Simply double-click the program file to start using it immediately. When using the software, you can choose between four different layouts or you can create your own ones. By default, the program offers three different desktop icon layouts, although the last one comes as a default one. If you want to use the other three, you just have to right-click the system tray icon and enable it. Additionally, the customization panel is also available via a right-click. You can select the desktop layout type, the icon size, the number of icons on the same row and even the shape you want to use on the desktop. In case you want to use the predefined shapes, just select the option and add as many icons as you want to the corresponding shape on the desktop. Once the layout is set, you can select the active profile and customize it as you prefer. While the customization panel is of much help to enable the easy customization of your desktop layout
